About the teacher:

My name is Dominika and I'm from a busy capital of England- London. My family roots include Lithuania, Belarus and Poland, where I was born.

The journey in Japan has started for me in June when I attended a short course in East Asian studies at university in Tokyo. I've realised how complex Japanese economy is and its close connection to cultural aspects, which I'm fascinated about.

I'm particularly interested in business and economy, because I have recently graduated from a master's degree in International Business Management. I'm currently a teacher with a TESOL Certification at a language school and I enjoy it a lot, especially when I can learn something new from my students. Besides that, I also work as a researcher on Asian development modelling.
